VOL. IX. MERIDIAN MISSISSIPPI THURSDAY NOVEMBER 15 1894. NO. 266

THE HISTORY OF A RING

Don't buy anything in the jewelry line simply because it is the "cheapest." The "cheapest," in almost every case, is a poor article. To illustrate: a young gentleman of this city very much admired a solitaire diamond ring in my stock. I priced it to him at $100, but he had been offered one of same weight for $87, and my argument that it was "cheaper" because it was an inferior stone was taken cum grano salis because it was natural for the salesman to claim superiority for his own goods. He bought the $87 stone from the other party, brought it to my store. I quietly handed him my ring, and when he placed them side by side, I tell you his face fell. One was a beautiful flashing gem, the other a muddy color, without fire or beauty by comparison. He offered me $30 to boot to swap with him, which, added to the $87 he had paid for his stone, made $117 for mine that he was willing to pay. I declined on the grounds that I did not sell those kind of diamonds. After figuring the difference between his diamond and a fine stone, he did not [illegible] worthless stone to his sweetheart, but bought my ring for $100, gave it to his girl and traded his muddy, "cheap" stone off to a private party at considerable loss. In every case you will find it the same. Cheap, low karat gold looks well when new, with its artificial colors on it, but soon turns a dirty, yellowish white. Cheap silver plate rubs and turns black; cheap clocks either won't run at all, or if they do run, don't keep correct time; and cheap watches—draw the veil, they swell the recording angel's balance on the Hade's side of the ledger every time—and last, but not least, more eyes have been ruined by "cheap" badly fitted spectacles than from any half dozen causes combined.

I cater to the genteel, intelligent trade; and if I don't sell first quality of goods as low as any legitimate retail jewelry house in the United States, I am willing to auction off my stock and quit, so no one can make a living at a lower per cent. than I charge.

THE NEW BOND ISSUE

Secretary Carlisle Calls For Bids For $50,000,000.

NO UPSET OR MINIMUM PER CENT.

Bonds to Bear 5 Per Cent, Which is to Be Paid in Coin.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Secretary Carlisle late this afternoon issued his call for bids for $50,000,000 of 5 per cent. ten-year bonds, interest to be paid in coin. The only material changes made in the present call from that issued Jan. 14 last are the omission of the upset or minimum per cent. which would not be accepted, and the notice that the proposals for the present issue must be sealed. It is confidently expected at the Treasury Department that the amount will be considerably in excess of that received in February. This opinion is based on the fact that there are exceptionally large amounts of money now idle and seeking investment in the money centres of the country, and upon the further fact that the February issue called for gold at 118.50, or about 2 per cent. above the price which would yield 3 per cent. From the last issue there was realized $58,660,917.63, and of this amount $52,850,264.24 was in gold coin, $5,810,420 in gold certificates and $238.39 in other money, which the sub-treasuries were compelled to take in making change. While these amounts were actually paid into the treasury in gold or its equivalent, a very considerable amount of gold was withdrawn from the sub-treasuries for the express purpose of using it in paying for bonds. The exact amount thus withdrawn cannot be ascertained, but the best knowledge obtainable is that is approximated [illegible] with a view of a more [illegible] the [illegible] of all [illegible] will from this date keep a record of all deposits of legal tenders made in exchange for gold and the names of the firms or persons making them.

FAILURE AT WINCHESTER.

The Firm of Lassiter Bros., General Merchants, Close Doors.

Special to The News.

WAYNESBORO, Miss., Nov. 14.—The mercantile firm of Lassiter Bros., of Winchester, failed yesterday. The assets are said to amount to about $3000 with liabilities reaching $7000.

This section was visited by a much needed shower of rain last night, which effectually settled the dust.

A Correction.

To the Editor of The News.

In your issue of Sunday, the 4th of November, in my first article bearing on "Corporal punishment in schools," I made the incidental assertion that such punishment had been increasing. This was construed, and rightly so, to mean in the public schools of Meridian. I have just been informed on good authority, that such is not the case, that it has in fact been gradually decreasing. I am glad not only to make the correction, but of the fact. I made the assertion because I had been recently hearing more about it, and without making the investigation I ought to have made, before venturing the assertion.

It appears that our South Side school has been almost or entirely free from it this session, that the record of the West End school is almost as good, the Central has had but little compared to its size, while in the East End School, which is nearest to my residence, it has been more frequent, in this school; perhaps, on the increase, as I asserted.

I note your editorial in this morning's issue. From your standpoint, of course, you are right. However, I regard any vacation as an entirely inadequate amount of time to educate the people on this question. We must, in my estimation, get the people to thinking on the question in order that reflection may bear fruit in the vacation referred to.

I beg further to state that I am not in any manner or degree an enemy of our public schools. I believe Professor Kincannon to be a thoroughly upright and conscientious man, that the teachers, one and all, do what they conceive to be best for the welfare of the pupils under their charge and for the schools. They, one and all, have my highest regard, as well as my heartfelt sympathy for the difficulties of the positions they have to fulfill, having many people of many minds to try to satisfy. Yours truly,

G. W. SOULE.

MR. EDWARD ATKINSON.

On the Variation and Adaptation of Southern Crops.

To the Editor of The News.

I find the following from the pen of Mr. Edward Atkinson in a late copy of The Manufacturers Record:

"The South needs yet more to study the variation and the adaptation of crops. It is evident that the control of the cotton crop is passing to Texas and to sections of the country best adapted to it. The light sandy uplands may continue to grow cotton as a food plant, the fibre being secondary, but may no longer compete with the in[illegible] as Southern [illegible] and testing them. There is no reason in the nature of things why wool and cotton should not be produced alternately from the same fields in the upper light soils, but until the South can control the incursions of cur dogs, who will undertake it?

There are crops grown in other parts of the world under corresponding conditions which would enable the possessors of the light upland soils to develop very rapidly. The leguminous plants supply the nitrogen requisite for the production of meat, and [illegible] can be grown in large quantity for use as fodder where it may not compete with the Western prairies in the production of grain. The more I investigate the leguminous plants, notably peanuts and lentils, I find in those inconspicuous crops—the one hardly begun to be developed; the other, unknown to the South—a promise of a development on the light upland soils exceeding in variety and in importance either the development of cotton or iron.

Mr. Atkinson, it is hardly necessary to state, is the leading statistician of the United States, and is endorsed as "a friend of the South" by the editor of the Manufacturers' Record. The result of his observation and study of the existing condition of agriculture in the South is well worthy of the thoughtful consideration of our farmers. Yours truly,

C. W. ROBINSON.

CLEOPATRA A SUCCESS.

Miss Lewis' Conception of the Great Woman.

The production of "Cleopatra" is one of the most magnificent performances from a scenic and spectacular standpoint that will ever be seen in this city.

The Cleopatra given is Miss Lewis' conception of the famous woman of the East. She portrays her as desperately in love with Marc Antony, very coquetish, and full of fury and whimsical notions, and is perfectly in accord with our idea of the Nile. One cannot witness a performance by Miss Lewis without recognizing in her marked ability, intelligence, and a complete mastery of emotionalism.

The play as written by Shakespeare is changed and rearranged to suit the ideas of Miss Lewis, and for the introduction of pictorial effects.

The scenery and costuming is gorgeous and very costly.

LOOK TO YOUR DAUGHTERS.

The Wives and Mothers that Are to Be.

Their Thin, Pale Cheeks and Lack of Spirit Leaves No Doubt.

The Nerves Are Poorly Fed and Blood Lacks in Red Corpuscles.

O, my boys are never nervous. One couldn't stand that. But with girls, you know, doctor, it is different.

Too many mothers reason like that. They do not like to hear their girls called tomboys, and they hasten to make them "ladylike," to keep them from running and climbing and from vigorous games, while the boys are laying in a stock of health that will last them far into middle age.

The least sign of physical failure on the part of girls at the critical times in their lives should ring a grave alarm. Pale lips, nervous habits, retarded growth, a lack of high, youthful spirits and a poor condition of the skin urgently demand a better and more complete nutrition.

In all cases, whether it be a young child or an aged person, Paine's celery compound adds vigor and increased weight by strengthening the very foundation of health, by feeding blood and nerves richly and promptly. It is only when the nerve centers are healthy that the other bodily functions can be healthy.

If anxious mothers will only follow the advice of the most careful physicians, and make sure that their children are getting sufficient material to meet the big demands made by their growing nerves and tissues, there will be an end to the weakly condition, the continual headaches, the "blue days," and the general ill-health that so few young girls escape.

The best ally against nervousness and irritability is that remarkable nerve food, Paine's celery compound, first prescribed by Dartmouth [illegible] physicians. They [illegible] a gain in quantity and quality of the blood. Trifles seem to worry them less, sleep comes naturally and refreshing, appetite increases, and their frames grow plump with solid flesh, because all the delicate parts of their nervous system, upon which the nutrition and well-being of the body directly depends, are beginning to be fully nourished and to work without friction.

A body thus fed by Paine's celery compound makes those joys and innocent pleasures possible, without which childhood and girlhood is sad to look upon.

THE LEAGUE AND ITS WORK.

Now that the campaign is over and politics for the time retired; now, that Democracy has triumphed wherever the message of truth and patriotism has been carried in Mississippi and the South, and now, that the advocacy of THE NEWS has received a hearty endorsement throughout East Mississippi, where its circulation is largest, we return again to our championship of the interests of this city and people, feeling that, first and last, these things command our most loyal support and permanent allegiance.

And so returning, we want to say that the primary interest demanding the attention of every public spirited [illegible] Young Men's [illegible]

[illegible] has already [illegible] work of [illegible] in promoting the progress and prosperity of our town. It counts to its credit the location of several manufacturing enterprises, one in operation and two already located and contracts for their erection signed. It has induced inquiries about Meridian from sources where the city was unknown before and has compelled a recognition of our advantages for industrial enterprises that, except for this agency, would never have been thought of. It has lent its influence to the promotion of every measure of local undertaking that promised to promote our welfare and kept a watchful eye over our educational, industrial and municipal affairs. It is already a marvel of achievement and a giant of possibility in its strength. It has gathered into one cohesive force all the elements of urban progress, civic pride and beneficent endeavor. It has united and organized into one compact body every factor of public spirit, that singly and alone was impotent and helpless, and made of them a strong, energetic and irresistible body whose work in the past justifies the prophecy of infinite usefulness in the future.

THE NEWS is proud of the work of THE LEAGUE; while yielding all credit to those who have so admirably conducted it, and claiming nothing for our humble part, it is gratifying to us to remember that the suggestion of its formation first originated in these columns and through the same instrumentality was urged to a successful consummation. It was only a bit of endeavor for the good of the city undertaken in line with our undeviating policy, and our reward is realized in its success. For this we claim neither credit nor applause. We have been consistent only with our motto and have not yet to complain of any want of appreciation on the part of the good people whom we have sought to serve.

Next Monday evening every member of the Y. M. B. L. is expected to be present at the meeting at 7:30 o'clock, when business of importance will receive attention, and addresses will be made by prominent citizens. Evince your loyalty to your city by a prompt attendance.

Notice.

Communications intended for publication in Sunday's paper must reach the office not later than Friday noon. Advertisements will be received up to 8 o'clock Saturday night.

And All the [illegible]

She looked so [illegible] aboard the car [illegible] the man with the cold in his head moved into the draft in order to give her plenty of room, and the conductor rang up two fares before he realized that she had given him a Canadian dime. The long legged little girl with her kept up an incessant stream of questions, but she answered them all pleasantly. The next time the car stopped a soldierly looking lady got in, and the pretty girl blushed very much as she greeted her.

"Is this your little sister?" the soldierly looking lady asked presently. "Do you know who I am, my dear? I am Harold's mother. I hope you like Harold."

"Oh, yes. He brings nicer candy than any of them. Only Mabel makes me go out of the parlor to eat it."

The pretty girl, with an agonized blush, mumbled something about "crumbs" and the "carpet."

"Quite right, my dear," replied the soldierly looking lady, "and it is foolish of Harold to waste his money on candy. He will need it all by and by."

The pretty girl became two shades pinker and looked out of the window.

"Well, my dear," returning to the small girl, "I hope you will like me as well as Harold. But why do you look at me so closely? Is there any thing wrong with my bonnet?"

"No'm," with an angelic smile. "I like you very much, and I don't think your nose is long at all."

"Grace!" cried the pretty girl.

"My nose long! Mercy, child, who ever said it was?"

"Why, sister did. She said that when she and Harold were married you had better keep that long nose of yours out of her affairs or she would—why, Mabel, what on earth are you stopping the car for? This isn't our street!"

And as the passengers in the car looked back they were pleased to see that Mabel was shaking her with all her might.—Chicago Tribune.

Origin of the Name Yankee.

For the last 100 years or more the philologists have been pondering and theorizing as to the probable origin of the word "Yankee," and yet the mystery has not been solved. Thierry thought it to be a corruption of "Jankin," a diminutive of John, a name bestowed upon the Dutch colonists of New York by their Connecticut neighbors. Dr. William Gerden, one of the first to write a history of the war of independence, [illegible] to have entertained an entirely different opinion. He says that "Yankee" was a slang or cant [illegible] Cambridge, Boston and [illegible] of the larger Massachusetts towns [illegible] 1713, being [illegible] [illegible] without the word good, for which word it then stood as an equivalent, as "Yankee cider," etc. Aubury, an English writer, gives still another theory to account for the origin of the word. He says: "It is derived from the Cherokee Indian word 'eankke,' which signifies both 'coward' and 'slave.' It was bestowed on the inhabitants of Virginia because the former would not assist them in their war with the Indians, from whose language the word is taken, and was at first only used as a term of derision."—St. Louis Republic.

Holmes' Fable.

I make very excellent fables occasionally. This, being a little outrageous, was articulated in a low key, very slow, with a pretty considerable blow on the table.

Once on a time a notion was started that if all the people in the world were to shout at once it might be heard in the moon. So the projectors agreed it should be done in just ten years. Some thousand shiploads of chronometers were distributed to the selectmen and other great folks of the different nations. For a year beforehand nothing else was talked about but the awful noise that was to be made on the great occasion. When the time came, everybody had their ears so wide open to hear the universal ejaculation of "Boo," the word agreed upon, that nobody spoke except a deaf man on one of the Fiji islands and a woman in Peking, so that the world had never been so still since the creation.

I was requested to give the moral of my fable. "It is too obvious," I observed, "to need explanation." The inquirer looked very indefinitely.—"Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."

HEALTHY CHILDREN come from healthy mothers. And mothers will certainly be healthy if they'll take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Nothing can equal it in building up a woman's strength, in regulating and assisting all her natural functions, and in putting in perfect order every part of the female system. It lessens the pains and burdens of child-bearing, supports and strengthens weak, nursing mothers, and promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and bracing nervine, and a guaranteed remedy for women's ills and ailments. In every chronic "female complaint" or weakness, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Thousands of people, with worse cases of Catarrh than yours probably is, have been permanently cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. That is the reason why its proprietors are willing to promise you $500 if you can't be cured.

Velocity of Explosive Waves.

Berthelot made a large number of experiments to determine the velocity of the explosive waves in the case of different explosives. Long, narrow tubes made of lead, tin or britannia metal were used and the rate of propagation of disturbance through the tube measured. He found this to depend on—(1) the diameter of the tube, (2) the density of the explosive, (3) the resistance of the material of the tube. The explosive wave from compressed gun cotton had a mean velocity of 5,200 meters per second in lead tubes and of 6,000 meters per second in tin tubes.

Liquid nitroglycerin gave results varying from 1,078 to 1,386 meters per second, while dynamite had a mean rate of 2,543 meters per second. It was found a matter of great difficulty to detonate the nitroglycerin in such narrow tubes. A curious feature was that whether the tubes were curved or straight the results obtained were substantially the same.—Knowledge.

Broke Up the Dance.

When the dance was nicely under way, a mild "kerchow" was heard from the center of the room.

"I am afraid you are taking cold, dear. I will shut"—

"Ah-ker-choo, ah-ker-choo!" came in high soprano tones.

—"I will shut the win"—

"Ker-choo! Oh, I never—chew, kerchoo!" was the only answer, and with tears streaming from her eyes she started to say it wasn't cold that made her sneeze, when her male escort startled her with a loud [illegible]:

"Ker-cheeuw, ker-choo! I ah, oh"—

This was very quickly followed by three "kercheeouws" in a higher key. Then there burst forth a storm of kercheow chorus from all over the room. Some one had scattered cayenne pepper on the floor, and as the dancers whirled it made them sneeze. This quickly broke up the dance, the dancers fl[illegible] [illegible]—Harford Courant.

Acrobatic Japanese Soldiers.

Every Japanese barrack has a gymnasium, and the Japanese soldiers rank among the best gymnasts in the world. In half a minute they can scale a 14 foot wall by simply bounding on each other's shoulders, one man supporting two or three others.

One of the curious plants of Miss Gould's greenhouses is a cactus called "the old man" because it seems to have a gray beard and hair. Another odd cactus is one in the shape of a ball, covered with spikes, which resemble fishhooks, and in the tropical regions, where the plant is a native, they are often used by anglers.

Petrarch spent his crazy life penning sonnets to the eyebrows of a portly married woman, the mother of a large family, while he utterly neglected his legitimate wife and would not permit his daughter to live under his roof.

[illegible]S KNAPSACK.

[illegible] and How It Should [illegible]acked.

[illegible] knapsack, its av[illegible] the obligation to [illegible] soldier of today [illegible]dvantage over his [illegible] arms. The latter [illegible]rowing away his [illegible] its weight or the [illegible] To do so means [illegible] and severe. The [illegible] away the moment [illegible]as carried it far [illegible]ny punishment to [illegible]le out of himself. [illegible]apsack is a very nec[illegible]oldier's equipment, [illegible]f time, experiment [illegible]een given to the per[illegible]hat will carry every[illegible]d yet be, when pack[illegible]um weight and size. [illegible] at present in use in [illegible]ply a waterproof can[illegible] to contain when pack[illegible] one complete change of [illegible] two pairs of stockings, [illegible]s, towel, soap, blacking [illegible]

[illegible]ese articles properly the [illegible]ded lengthwise so as to be [illegible]de. Roll tightly, leaving [illegible]nrolled, and place in the [illegible]e roll is tight against the [illegible]en fold the unrolled part un[illegible] is even with the opening of [illegible]he drawers, folded the same [illegible] the blanket, is placed next, [illegible]h comes the undershirt. The [illegible] then placed, heels up and soles [illegible]een the folded blanket and the [illegible]he bag, one on each side. Be[illegible]e drawers and the undershirt [illegible]s of stockings are then placed [illegible]o show the double fold. The [illegible] kit is then placed above the [illegible]hirt and out of sight, the toilet [illegible] neatly disposed in the pocket, [illegible]p of the knapsack turned down [illegible]uttoned, and the pack is complete. [illegible] now remains the overcoat, which [illegible]n rolled is fastened by straps on the [illegible] of the pack.

[illegible]o secure uniformity the following [illegible]thod of rolling the coat has been [illegible]opted by the war department: Turn [illegible]e left sleeve inside out; fold the coat [illegible]own the middle seam of the back, right [illegible]de out, front edges to the left, and lay [illegible]t flatly and smoothly on the ground, tail away from the feet; pull the cape out from under the coat and spread it double; turn both tails of coat up about eight inches, the upper one over and the lower one under; fold the skirts in from both sides until they just meet in the center, which will make the roll just the width of the knapsack. Then fold the cape same width as the coat, and beginning with the cape roll up very tightly and as even as possible—the tighter the better—being careful to keep the folded edges well caught. When rolled clear up, turn the exposed tail back over the roll, taking care not to loosen the ends, and the roll will be securely bound.

The shelter tent half, neatly folded so as to show the company, regiment and number, will then be rolled around the overcoat roll so as just to show the edges, and the four shelter tent pins placed between its folds so as to show [illegible] of the points projecting [illegible] the rear and the raw edge or hem just above the edge of the knapsack, this arrangement giving the best water and dust shed. The buckle of the overcoat strap to be on top of the roll, the end of the strap, if of any length, to be rolled up. The shelter tent poles, of which each man carries two halves, are carried under the flap of the knapsack so as to throw the roll away from the back of the head and thus permit freer use of the arms.

The weight of the knapsack thus packed and arranged should not exceed 24 pounds, a good load in itself for a man to carry throughout a daily march averaging 15 miles.—Exchange.

How She Wanted to Be Painted.

"I want you to paint my picture," said a wealthy lady to an artist in Paris. "I don't care about the price. When can you begin?"

"I will be ready in a week from today."

A week afterward the artist awaited his sitter.

At the hour appointed a maid appeared with a large box.

"What's this?"

"Madam's costume," and the maid departed without another word.

He supposed the lady would appear and put the dress on there. She did not come. Two or three days passed and no message. Suddenly the lady bounced into the studio.

"Well, how is the picture progressing?"

"Madam, you have given me no sittings. I have not been able to begin."

"Why, didn't you get the dress I sent you?"

"Yes, I have a box of madam's here, but I can't produce a portrait without personal attendance."

"I thought you could fill in the head at any time. The dress cost 3,000 francs, and I wanted it painted. The likeness doesn't matter."—Paris Journal.

Chances of Death In Battle.

At the battle of Solferino, according to M. Cassendi's carefully deduced calculations, a comparison of the number of shots fired on the Austrian side with the number of killed and wounded on the part of the enemy shows that 700 bullets were expended for every man wounded and 4,200 for each man killed. The average weight of the ball used was 30 grains; therefore it must have taken at least 126 kilograms or 277 pounds of lead for every man put out of the way. Yet Solferino has gone into history as a most important and bloody engagement.

Bogert, in light of the above, was not far from right when he quaintly said, "War is awful, but the sound of war is awfuler."—St. Louis Republic.

THE PATHOLOGICAL NOVEL.

A Medical View of the Latest Specialty In Modern Fiction.

Among physicians "The Heavenly Twins" is looked upon not as a literary vesture to be judged by artistic standards, but as a readable representation of symptoms which suggest definite pathological conditions.

"Ships That Pass In the Night" is admirable as a pulmonary record, and "The Yellow Aster" affords an insight into the psychic phenomena resulting from neglect of natural instincts and desires, which, surviving the appropriate period of life, subsequently assert themselves in the form of belated maternal love and ex post facto philoprogenitiveness.

As to Miss Harraden's book, while we find it useful in the profession for its glimpses into refined sickroom conversation and pulmonary persiflage, we regret, from a medical point of view, that after giving such a careful history of the heroine's case the author permitted her to be killed by an omnibus. It is humiliating, after following attentively the course of the disease and the method of treatment, to be told that an omnibus was the cause of death and to be dismissed without hearing the result of the autopsy. Moreover, we found her style so delightful that we would have gladly followed the hero to the last hemorrhage, but that, too, was denied us.

Sarah Grand's cases are open to the same objection of incompleteness. She starts out enticingly with such a character, for instance, as Edith's husband, but leaves the latter and more interesting phrases of his pathological history untold. As a general rule, however, she comes up to the requirement of modern fiction; the cases of most of her characters can be diagnosed, and with a little more clinical experience we have no doubt that her future novels will be above reproach.

There is danger lest in the first stages of the medical movement in literature young writers will attempt to cover too wide a pathological area in their novels and forget the inexorable law of specialism that obtains in the medical profession itself.

To introduce a paretic or ataxic patient in a dermatological novel would not only destroy the unity of the story, but would justly expose the author to a suspicion of a want of thoroughness. If the writer has determined upon appendicitis as his plot, he should not waste his energies upon irrelevant diseases in his minor characters. He could gain variety by introducing other forms of enteric disorders, but should never exceed the limits of the abdominal region. Until he has had a thorough medical training we think the course of a single disease should supply him with all the medico-literary material that he can handle in an intelligent manner. A blow on the head supplied the author of "God's Fool" with all the plot that he needed. Ibsen's "Ghosts" is simply the dramatization of an inherited brain disease, and many a successful short story is based upon a case of simple mania with delusions.—American Medico-Surgical Bulletin.

Burnt Wood Decoration.

The kind of wood you should use depends greatly upon the size and character of your decoration. For the frieze of [illegible] would be best, for it would allow of bold treatment of lines. But if you were intending to ornament a jewel box hard wood would be best, because it lends itself to the most delicate work. You can make upon very hard wood a line as delicate as the finest produced by an etcher with his needle upon the copper plate.

Burnt wood decoration is rather slow work. It is more allied to carving or etching than to painting. I go over and over my work, as the etcher bites and rebites his plate. I deepen a tone here by reburning, or I work it off with my emery cloth or sandpaper and reburn it. This is a little secret of technique which I have never told before.

The burning of wood seems to be one of nature's arts. The Japanese employs the hot iron for permanently tinting his bamboo; even the savage uses it for tracing designs upon his wooden domestic utensils. Yet, although it is so simple that the aborigines employ it upon the handles of their weapons, it is susceptible of being carried as far as any medium of expression we have in the graphic arts. Think how wide, too, is its scope—from the delicate traceries for a dainty jewel box to the bold frieze or panel of a spacious library or altar decoration.—Art Amateur.

An American Song.

A good story was told on the ship by a Boston man who was in Antwerp while the preparations were in progress for the exposition. Representatives of all nations were there preparing exhibits from their respective countries. In the evening all the visitors were in the habit of gathering in a large hall on the grounds to listen to the band play. Out of compliment to the visitors the national airs of the different countries were played and received an ovation from the group of that nationality in the hall. One night the Boston friend attended the band performance. This playing of national airs was on the programme. All were played, but not a thing that could be twisted into an air for the land of freedom. A delegation of the Americans went up to the leader and told him that they felt slighted; that their country had not been recognized. With profuse apologies the leader said it was clearly an oversight and promised to give them the American air at once. He distributed the music, and, waving his baton, the band broke loose, not with any familiar patriotic air, but "The Man That Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo." Amusement among the Americans finally gave way to visions of Old Hoss Hoey and his song, and when the band finished the tumultuous applause from the American delegation elicited an encore.—Washington Star.

WHAT YOU WANT.

An advertiser does not want "space," nor does he care particularly about seeing his name in print. He wants other people to see it, though, and he will, therefore, place his "ad." where it will be read by the greatest number. He will place it in THE NEWS.

Now, we claim that we pay more postage at the post-office than all other secular publications in this city combined, and if the out of town trade is what you want, you will know how to reach it.

As for our city circulation, everybody knows that THE NEWS is taken in nearly every home in Meridian, and those who do not take it borrow it with regularity and read it without remorse.

This newspaper is read in this city, IT IS READ IN THE FAMILY by the ladies and by the children, and that is why it is the best advertising medium for people who have goods to sell.

SOUTH AND WEST TRADE CONGRESS.

To be Held in New Orleans Nov. 21, 22, and 23d—List of Delegates.

A special meeting of the South and West Trade Congress, inaugurated at Wichita, Kansas, last April, will be held in New Orleans on the 21st, 22nd and 23rd days of the present month. Each town and city will be entitled to five delegates to be appointed by the Mayor. In response to an invitation from the Board of Trade of New Orleans, Mayor Dial has appointed the following citizens to represent Meridian in the convention. Messrs W H Hardy, W F Gray, Abe Klien, W W George and F W Williams.

Each commercial organization of the city is entitled to five delegates, and the Board of Trade and Cotton Exchange and the Young Men's Business League will doubtless appoint the delegates they are entitled to. There will also be in the convention one delegate from each transportation company.

The following extract from a circular letter addressed to Mayor Dial sets out the object of this Trade Congress:

The commercial bodies in the West and South have reached the conclusion that the rapidly growing population in these States demand now that their productions and manufactures shall be marketed on the best terms possible and at the lowest terms of transportation, thus giving to the producer and manufacturer the highest price for his products; also that the import goods required by the South and West shall be delivered to them at minimum cost.

To accomplish these benefits it is apparent to the business mind that the Southern and Western States must take advantage of their geographical positions as regards their exports and imports. Hence it becomes imperative that the Gulf and South Atlantic ports must assume their natural business position and become the outlets and inlets for the commerce of this vast territory.

In developing this great work the manufacturer, planter, farmer, exporter, importer, and interior merchant must work together in harmony with the transportation companies, for the common objects to be obtained is vital to all.

Mission at the Catholic Church.

THE NEWS is indebted to a friend for the following notice of the interesting services now in progress at the Catholic church:

The mission that was opened at the Catholic church last Sunday at high mass by Rev. Francis Power, S. J., of New Orleans, and is being conducted by him every morning and evening of this week, is deserving the earnest attention of all Christian people of the city. Father Power is a preacher of great force and eloquence. His sermons are logical, instructive and convincing. They treat of the most [illegible] [illegible] to the [illegible]. The first sermon was on "The Importance of Salvation" Sunday night, and was delivered to a large congregation who were all deeply moved by the great truths presented to them in a strong light. The sermon Monday night was on "Sin," and laid bare the malice and enormity of that dreadful evil. The sermon Tuesday night was on "The Forgiveness of Sin." It was a powerful appeal to the sinner to do penance for his sins and, by a true repentance, obtain God's mercy, which is freely held out to the sinner when he gives up his sin and returns to the observance of God's holy law. Father Power will preach tonight on a subject of great importance and interest to everyone. Those who attend will be well repaid for doing so. The morning sermons are also interesting. They are on practical subjects and treat of the daily life and conduct of men and women in the world around us. All are invited to attend these exercises.

Married.

The rites of matrimony were celebrated yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the bride's home, in Clarke county, fifteen miles south of this city, Rev. Mr. David, of the East End Baptist church, officiating, between Miss Pearl Shurdavan to Mr. W H. Collins, of Tuscaloosa, Ala.

The happy bride and groom reached Meridian last night and left for Chattanooga on last night's A. G. S. No. 2. Mr and Mrs Collins will make their future home in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Queen City Lodge.

Queen City Lodge No. 61, Knights of Pythias, met in regular session at their castle Hall last night, with all the regularly elected officers in the chair. The amplified rank of Page was conferred upon two strangers. Two pages were announced in waiting in the ante room, who were brought in and very impressively inducted into the rank of Esquire. The lodge adjourned and will meet again next Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock.

THE Y. M. B. LEAGUE.

A General Meeting to Be Held on Monday, Nov. 19th.

At a meeting of the Governing Committee of the Young Men's Business League held yesterday evening it was decided to have a general meeting of the members of the League next Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A full attendance of the membership is urgently requested.

The Y. M. B. League.

The rooms of the Young Men's Business League will be kept open each evening until 10 o'clock, and visitors, as well as members of the League, will be cordially welcomed at all times. The hall will be well heated, there will be found on the tables the latest daily papers and magazines and a porter in attendance. 11 13 tf

ANTI-OPTION CONVENTION.

Delegates Appointed by Mayor Dial to the Meeting at Vicksburg on Nov. 20.

Mayor Dial has appointed the following as delegates to the Anti Option Convention to be held in Vicksburg on next Tuesday, the 20th inst: T C Carter, H M Threefoot, S M Bailey, S A Witherspoon, I Marks, Jno W Broach, Jno D McInnis, J. H. Wright, S B Watts, Joseph Baum and R F Quarles.

The object of this convention is to impress upon the United States Senate the importance of passing the Hatch Bill or some kindred measure at the coming session of Congress. The desire is that all communities be represented, and delegations are being appointed by many cities, towns, counties and governors of States. Reduced rates will be given by all railroads. It is to be hoped the above delegates appointed by the Mayor may make it convenient to attend, for the occasion is one of much importance to our city and to our entire section.

At the Grand.

The scenic features of The Tornado presented at the Grand last night were superb; they were remarkably realistic, and in this respect perhaps the best ever witnessed in Meridian. The play, in itself, was one of stereotyped melodramatic character with the average amount of comedy done in the average fashion, with the usual complement of baffled villainy and triumphant virtue fairly interpreted. There was some good acting by Mr R J Guptill in the dissecting room scene, while Miss Kate Watson evinced an excellent conception of her part; Miss Dolly Deverre had the part of the pert and willful school girl and deserves credit for the manner of her rendition of it. The play deserved a much better house than greeted it.

CORSICA AND ITS PEOPLE.

The Men Were Endowed With Courage and Other Primitive Virtues.

A lofty mountain ridge divides the island into eastern and western districts. The former is gentler in its [illegible]. Looking as it does toward Italy, it was in the middle ages closely bound in intercourse with that peninsula. Richer in its resources than the other part, it was more open to outside influences and for this reason freer in its institutions. The rugged western division had come more completely under the yoke of feudalism, having close affinity in sympathy and some relation in blood with the Greek, Roman, Saracenic and Teutonic race elements in France and Spain. The communal administration of the eastern slope, however, prevailed eventually in the western as well, and the differences of origin, wealth and occupation, though at times occasioning intestine discord, were as nothing compared with the common characteristics which knit the people of the entire island into one national organization, as much a unit as was their territory by reason of its insular situation and in spite of its mountain spine.

The people of this small commonwealth were in the main of Italian blood. Some slight connection with the mother land they still maintained in the relations of commerce and by the education of their professional men at Italian schools. While a comparatively few supported themselves as tradesmen or seafarers, the mass of the population was dependent for a livelihood upon agriculture. As a nation, therefore, they had long ceased to follow the course of general European development. They had been successively the subjects of Greece, Rome and the caliphate, of the emperor and of the republic of Pisa. Their latest master was the Genoese republic, which had now degenerated into an untrustworthy oligarchy.

United to that state originally by terms which gave the island a "speaker," or advocate, in the Genoese senate and recognized the most cherished habits of a hardy, natural minded and primitive people, they had little by little been left a prey to their own faults in order that their unworthy mistress might rule thereby with less exertion. Agriculture languished, and the minute subdivision of arable land finally rendered it profitless. Among a people who are isolated not only as islanders, but also as mountaineers, old institutions are particularly tenacious of life. That of the vendetta or of blood revenge, with its accompanying [illegible] [illegible] rule the carrying of arms was winked at, quarrels became rife, and often family confederations, embracing a considerable part of the country, were arrayed one against the other in lawless violence. The feudal nobility, few in number, were unrecognized and failed to cultivate the industrial arts in the security of costly strongholds, as their class did elsewhere, while the fairest portions of land not yet held by them were gradually absorbed by the monasteries, which the Genoese favored as likely to render easier the government of a turbulent people. The human animal, however, throve. Of medium stature and powerful mold, with black hair and piercing eyes, with [illegible] and sinewy limbs, endowed with courage and other primitive virtues, the Corsican was everywhere sought as a soldier and could be found in all the armies of the southern continental states.—"New Life of Napoleon" in Century.

Man's Curiosity.

The Duchess of Westminster put into her guest chamber a curious Swiss clock, to which was attached a printed notice, "Please do not touch!" When M. Joly, the Canadian Liberal, visited her grace, he ventured to inquire the reason for the prohibition. "You are the twentieth man who has asked that question," replied the duchess gleefully. "Women, you know, are supposed to be proverbially curious, and I put that placard on the clock to test the same weakness in men, and I am happy to say I find them not a whit less curious than women. I keep a list of all the gentlemen who have asked me the question you have just put, and there has been only one exception among all my guests who have occupied the room; that was Mr. Fawcett, the late postmaster general, and he, poor man, was blind."—New York Press.

A Matrimonial Compromise.

"You and your wife always seem to get on admirably together. How did you manage it?"

"We came to an understanding early in our married life and have kept things up ever since on the basis we established then."

"Tell me all about it."

"Well, when we first went to housekeeping my wife wanted linen sheets and I wanted cotton ones, and"—

"Well?"

"Well, we compromised by having linen sheets."—Paris Herald.

As to the Eye.

I have been studying at my profession for five years, and by hard application gained a diploma which endorses emphatically my thorough knowledge of the intricate and mysterious complication of the eye. It is dangerous to wear wrong glasses. You may not at the time know what mischief it works on your head and nervous system. You frequently suffer with headache and dizziness, and you know not what causes it but nine times out of ten you were badly fitted with glasses or not wearing them at all, and need a well and carefully fitted glass to relieve the strain the eye is called upon to do. Come and get well and carefully fitted glass. I will guarantee relief and satisfaction.
